Need of Industrial Training.

With "Industrial Education" as the subject for her paper, Mrs. John Dewey said, in part:

"Public opinion, education and manufacturers agree on the need for school industrial training. Manual training results have proved inadequate. Education for trades must result in concation for trades must result in con-servation. This paper suggests means and methods of trade training in ele-mentary and high school life, to pre-pare workers against the rapidly changing industrial methods. Economic Function of Women.

"The Economic Function of Women was the subject of an address by Mrs. Henrietta W. Colvin, who said, in part "The women of the United States are divided into two groups, one of 8,000,-000, who labor and receive compensa tion, and another of 44,700,000, who are homekeepers, discharging their duties without definite financial remuneration. .The wage-earner of today may without definite financial remuneration. The wage-earner of today may be the homemaker of tomorrow, while the protected wife may become the wage-earning widow and mother.

Though only 17 per cent of native white American women are actual wage-earners, yet one out of every three is a wage-earner between sixteen and twenty-five years, and one out of five between twenty-five and thirty-five. At some time, however, 91 per cent marry. Woman's chief economic function is, therefore, in the home. Here she may be a producer, a conserver or a consumer of wealth. Only one housewife out of ten can afford servants.

"Much food material is wasted in America. The food belongs to all the people and none may rightfully waste that which another needs. Though the individual family may not suffer from such careless destruction of food, clothing, fuel and household comforts, the nation, with 50,000,000 to clothe and care for, cannot afford such waste. The death of a young man or woman represents a loss to the nation of $3,009. When the homemaker protects the health of the nation.

Giving a "Sketch of the Organization of Schools for Nurses in the Republic of Cuba," Miss M. E. Hibbard said, in part:

"The Consumers' League has expressed for a quarter century the idea that women have an urgent duty because they exercise this great power of selection. Their duty is to inquire into the history of the goods which they buy, and to know whether the men and women, the youth and children who are employed have good wages as with backs at a comfortable height, rest at night, and a proper interval at noon of the wives of the delegates of the congress, from 3 to 8 o'clock.
